‘Destroy Society As We Know It’: Zuckerberg Crosses Fingers, Hopes Facebook Won’t Be Remembered as the Dumpster Fire It Is

Recently, the cyborg that runs Facebook gave an interview to Axios on HBO in which he said he would not remove anti-vaxxer material and criticized the narrative by the corporate left that Facebook is driven by right-wing content. Now, in order to assess the truth of that statement on right-wing content, one has to ask what is meant by right-wing? If PragerU is right-wing, then there is certainly an echo chamber of ‘right-wing’ content on Facebook. Conservatives are masters of creating their own safe space far away from criticism by either the left or the further right.

Anything to the right of PragerU is immediately purged, which is why I’m proud to say I’ve never had a Facebook account. I’ve always hated that site personally. The reason he is concerned about his legacy, is not really because social media is driving toxicity, and I think he’s right about that. He’s concerned because he’s an egomaniac like all immorally wealthy people.

People often say ‘the hate was always there, now it’s just easier to hate’. No, I don’t think so. Society is extremely tensed up and divided along many lines. The fact that we have social media makes the ugliness pop out right at you on the screen, but it was NOT always there. It’s just that in a diverse society whose elite have decimated the middle class, the family and whose cultural institutions promote the most bizarre obscenities, there is bound to be chaos. And now, you get a notification every time it happens.
